SUPERINTENDENT LATHROP RICUL-PATES WARDEN BROWN.

He Puts the Greater Part of the Blame on Hulse, but He Does Not Hear His Story or Those of the Other Accused Keepers. SING SING, April 25.-Gen. Austin Lathron. Superintendent of State Prisons, reached here 111 o'clock to-day to investigate the escape of Roehl and Pallister. Warden Charles Dur ston of Auburn, who will succeed Warden Bill Brown at the Sing Sing prison on May 1; C. K. Baker, ex-Assistant Superintendent of State Prisons, and John McCune, ex-Assistant Adjutant-General, came with him. The investigation was official and final. None of the suspended keepers was summoned or examined. The verdict of Superintendent Lathrop, delivered before he left for New York at 4 o'clock, was: Hulse is severely censured for violating the rule established by custom which forbids a guard when alone to unlock a cell door to minister to a convict. Hulse and Murphy are censured for not welling and for not trying to give an alarm. Glynn should have visited the death house ones on the night of the escape. Maker should have gone to the door of the death house once every hour on the night of the escape."

That was all. None of the suspended guards was dismissed. Warden Brown was not present save to greet Superintendent Lathrop and Warden Durston. Superintendent Lathrop asked at once for Principal Keeper Connaughton, and went with him into the death house. What happened there was not made public. Superintendent Lathrop came out alone an hour later, and went in to take dinner with Warden Brown. When he came out the writer

Yes, this is an official investigation," he said, "and it is final. Let me say first that I do not blame the management Keeper Connaughton is able, reliable, and the best man in the right place."

And Warden Brown?' was asked. "I find no fault with him. The discipline and management here are satisfactory in every way. I do not think money was used in aiding or in rendering possible the escape of Rochl and Pallister. Huise is to blame. He had no business to open that cell door. He

s there a rule in the book of rules for prison employees forbidding a guard to open a cell door when alone, as Hulse did?"

"No." said Superintendent Lathrop, "but there is a fixed rule, unwritten, but founded on custom. It was a foolish, thoughtless, reckless thing for Hulse to do, and then, after t was done and Boehl and Pallister had gone. Hulse and Murphy should have yelled or made some noise to summon help. I cannot underthought it was not worth while, their duty demanded that they should at least try. Why a watchman outside the prison wall heard the men hammering at the roof. Now, if that is the case surely Hulse and Murphy could have been heard. In regard to all this talk about the escape being planned it is bosh. Rochi acted on an impulse. It was not premeditated. Pallister was shrewd enough to improve the opportunity when it came his way. Both men then hurried about seeking a means

Both men then hurried about seeking a means of exit. They tried the bathroom first, and when they failed there thought of the root. I do not believe from what I learned to-day that Harris could have gone with them. They did not unlock his cell door at any time or offer to let him out. I doubt, too, whether the could have gone with them. They did not unlock his cell door at any time or offer to let him out. I doubt, too, whether the could have gone with them. They did not not be the night Guard Giynn and Night Yardman Maher, from what I can learn they did not do their full duty on the night of the secape. But even if they had they would not necessarily have been in time to prevent the escape. Giynn is supposed to visit every guard at night once. He did not so to see Hulse and Murphy that night. Maher should have gone to the door of the death house once every hour up to 9 o'clock, when Murphy joined Hulse. I am not prepared to say he did not do this.

"The probable effects of this escape I cannot easily foretell. But two errors will probably be specifilly remedied. The first relates to the law that prolongs a condemned man's stay in the death house almost indefinitely by means of numerous writs and stays. When a man is sent to the prison to die he should go to die, with all lugal aquabbling over. The second ercorrelates to the present kind of cell door. There is no doubt that wickets should be put in the doors, and all food and other things passed through them. It is a very risky thing for even two guards to open a cell door. The wicket does away with all this danger. If wickets had been in the doors of the cells of Ilosh and Pallister they would not be at large today."

"If the cell doors had not been opened the Ideal and Pallister they would be to-day.

"If the cell doors had not been opened the weakness of the roof of the death house would have made little difference. However, an iron roof is now being put on."

"What will be done with Hulse, Murphy, Giran, and Maher?" was asked.

"I have investigated and have made my verdiet public. That settles it," said Superindant Lathron.

Sergeant Glynn, Night Yardman Maher, and Guarda Huise and Murphy could not be found to-day. Murphy is at his home in Kingston. The other men were not at their houses, or about the prison or streets. None of them was notified of the investigation or summoned Warden Brown said he would not act in their

Other clues, about as worthless as this one, have been pouring in to-day. Since last Saturday morning men resembling Roehl and Pailister have been reported as seen in twenty-three different parts of the country by forty-one different persons. Some one telephoned to the prison this afternoon that Deputy Sheriff Pugsley of Westchester county had caught the two men near Newburgh, and was bringing them back to the prison, when they escaped by jumping from the train near Croton. Investigation showed that Deputy Sheriff John Hirshell of White Pains was taking an Italian named Angeleo bebatino from Peekskill to White Plains to serve a sentence of twenty days for disorderly conduct and that the Italian broke away as the train approached Croton and jumped off. Wilkiel Swain an employee on the squeduct, and William Van Auken, the New York Central station agent at Croton, chased him. The Italian saw them following, and threw away a lat of papers and a razor. He was caught after a ten-minute chase, and taken back to Hirshell, who took him onto White Plains.

MISTAKEN FOR ROERL.

Bilworth Choate's Bandaged Head Causes Panic in the Melatyre Household, Since the escape of the condemned murderers, Pallister and Rochl, from Sing Sing, a live tonic in the domestic circle of Assistant District Attorney John F. McIntyre has been the threat made by Roehl after his conviction that he would settle with Mr. McIntre at some future time. On Monday evening, during Mr. McIntyre's absence from home, this was the subject of the conversation in which members of his family were engaged at his house at 148 East Eighty-sixth street when the house beil rang. The servant who responded to the

"Please tell Mr. McIntyre that Dilworth Choate wanted to see him."
When the name of Choate was pronounced the members of the McIntyre household felt much relieved. They had heard of him in connection with the Carlysie Harris trial, although they did not know that Dilworth Choate had been so badly hurt in a fight on Monday evening that it necessitated his wearing bandages around his head. Choate's alleged assallants, J. C. Benson, a saloon keeper, and Fred Schmidt, a bartender, were helt in $500 bail for examination in the Harlem Police Court yesterday.

Three Italians Sentenced, One to Death. John Delfino, the Italian who was recently convicted of murder in the first degree in Brooklyn for the fatal shooting of Mrs. Caroline Gessell, was sentenced yesterday by Justice Cullen to be killed in Sing Sing in the week commencing June 12. The case will be week commencing June 12. The case will be carried to the Court of Appeals.

Angelo Santori and Michael Cassalla, two of the six Italians who were convicted of murder in the second degree for their part in the killing of Letter Carrier Peter J. Eckles on a ferryhoat on the night of Jan. I, were sentenced yesterday to imprisonment for life in Sing Sing by Justice Cullen in the Court of Oyer and Terminer in Brooklyn. The other four Italians, who have been indicted for the same offence, will be tried soon.

MR. HEPBURN A BANK PRESIDENT.

The Third National Secures the Services of the Ex-Comptroller of the Currency.

At a meeting of the directors of the Third National Bank of this city, held resterday, the Hon. A. B. Hepburn, who has just retired from the Comptrollership of the Currency, was elected President, and the office of Vice-President was created for Gen. John B. Woodward, who during the past year has filled the posttion of temporary President of the bank. Mr. Hepburn left Washington yesterday afternoon. and will probably qualify for his new place to-day. A director of the tank said yesterday that, in his judgment, as well as that of his colleagues, the institution was very fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Hepburn, who is unusually well qualified for the responsibilities he is about to assume, having been for several years Superintendent of the Banking Department of this State, and after that National Bank Examiner for the cities of New York and Brooklyn.

He also added to his reputation for executive ability by the manner in which, as receiver. he wound up the affairs of the Continental Life Insurance Company. Earlier in his career Mr. Hepburn served in the State Legislature for five successive terms, was a member of the Committees on Insurance, Judiciary, Ways and Means, and other important committees. Among the well-knowngmeasures introduced by him, which became law largely through his efforts, was the bill making life insurance policies non-forfeitable after the payment of three annual premiums, and requiring the companies, upon application, to issue paid-up insurance to an amount which the surreader value of the policy would purchase at regular rates. He was Chairman of the celebrated failroad Investigating Commission from which resulted among other important measures, the act for creating the present Baliroad Commission and the act requiring annual reports and compelling a continuous balance sheet.

Mr. Hepburn will assume his new position with a knowledge of the laws governing both Mr. Hepburn served in the State Legislature

Mr. Hapburn will assume his new position with a knowledge of the laws governing both National and State banks, with an intimate acquaintance with bank officials throughout the country and with a familiarity with methods of business and of credits such as is possessed by few bank Presidents. The announcement of his election as President of the Third National was well received by the banking community when made known yesterday.

FRANK SCHLESINGER MISSING.

He Was a Broker at 45 Greene Street and Disappeared on April 14.

Frederick G. Dow, a lawyer of 192 Broadway, reported to Police Inspector McLaughlin yes-terday that Frank Schlesinger, formerly a broker and importer at 45 Greene street, had been missing from his home at College Point since the afternoon of April 14, and requested his aid in the search for the missing man. Two years ago, he said, Mr. Schlesinger's health began to fall, and he went to Europe for a while. He became worse, and upon re-

When last seen Mr. Schlesinger went to say good-by to a friend who was about to sall for Europe. Mr. Dow does not think that Mr. Schlesinger has committed suicide, or that he has met with foul play.

Mrs. Schlesinger and her two children, little girls of Sand 10 years, reside at the Gerlach on Twenty-seventh street. The missing man is 38 years old, weighs about 165 pounds, and is 5 feet 11 inches tall. He has dark brown hair and a pointed brown beard. When he went sway he had on a black diagonal overcout with silk facings, dark cutaway coat and trousers, and a black derby. He is very near-sighted.

The Thirty-day Bills, ALBANY, April 25 .- The list of thirty-day bills awaiting Executive approval was received by Gov. Flower from the printer to-night. They number 403, or forty-five less than the number which remained in the hands of the Governor last year when the Legislature adjourned. Any of these bills which do not re journed. Any of these bills which do not receive the approval of the Governor by May 20 will fail to become laws. The Governor will grant no formal hearings upon pending bills. Typewritten communications, or briefs relating thereto, will receive careful consideration, said the Governor to-night, and these should be submitted at once. Communications referring to different bills should be on separate sheets of paper. The Governor will not take any action upon bills affecting New York or Brooklyn for at least ten days, at the request of the authorities of those cities, as they wish to examine all such bills before the Governor considers them.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE NEW YORK APPOINTMENTS?

Representative Tracey of Albany Says that He Isn't and that He Does'nt Know Who Is-More New Yorkers Apply for Office Under the Treasury Department-An Old time Henator Calls on the President.

Washington, April 25. - Representative Tracer of Albany was at the White House again today. Regarding his frequent calls on the President the Evening Acres says:
"There has been a good deal of speculation as to who is responsible for the New York appointments which have been made up to date. First one and then another of the Congressional delegation has denied that the nominations have been made upon his recom-mendation. Finally suspicion fell upon Gen. Tracey of Albany, and it seemed to rest comfortably on his shoulders for several reasons His strong Administration sentiments are well known, and the cordial relations existing between himself and the President lent additional color to the suggeston. He has been at the White House several times. He was there yesterday, and when he came again to-day I accused him of securing all the patronage which has so far been given to the Empire State. He denied the accusation, and in his cheerful way proceeded to give reasons why suspicion should be diverted from him-

"'It is true,' said he, smiling, 'that I have been here before, and have even fallen asleep for an hour while waiting in the President's antercom; but as a matter of fact I have only anteroom; but as a matter of fact in Ne only seen Mr. Cleveland twice since his inauguration. It is somebody other than myself who is getting the patronage. To show you that I am telling the truth I will tell you of my experience in a small Post Office case, in which my wife showed remarkable prophetic gifts, which, possibly, are worth cultivating. I wanted to have a friend of mine appointed to this Post Office and I prepared his papers and brought them over here to file with Mr. Thurber. I thought the private secretary would be able to bring the matter to the President's notice and tell him of my interest in the case. Mrs. Tracesy wanted to know all about it, and asked what had been done. I told her that I had filed the papers with Mr. Thurber, and that he had said that they would be referred to the President. "Yes," she replied, "he will refer them to the President and that will te the last you'll hear of them." I laughed, but three days afterward another man was appointed Postmaster. So, you see, even if I am not gotting much patronage, I have a wife whose prophecies come true, concluded the General." seen Mr. Cleveland twice since his inaugurasee the President and pay my respects."

This was the statement made to the door-keeper at the White House this morning by an old man whose hair was snow white, whose form was bent with age, but whose step was firm as that of any of the callers who climbed the stairway. The venerable visitor was exsenator Bradbury of Maine. He was not readily recognized by the doorkeeper, so he was requested to wait out in the corridor until some of the Senators and Representatives who thronged the Cabinet room had been disposed of by the President. The mistake was afterward corrected, and Mr. Bradbury was invited to take a more confortable and exalted seat in the Cabinet room. He made himself known to ex-Representative Dunnell of Minnesota, who in turn introduced him to several Congressmen, who listened interestedly to his recollections of Congressional life many years ago.

Representative Wise of Virginia called on the President to-day and presented a petition of certain business men and bankers of litchmond, asking the President to issue bonds to relieve the financial situation. The petition was received without comment, but it was probably considered at the meeting of the Cabinet, which followed shortly after Mr. Wise's visit.

Postmaster-General Dissell has sent out scouts with instructions to capture for him a first-class stenographer to act in the capacity of private secretary. The salary is $1.800 per annum. In the face of the army of office seekers concentrated in Washington, it is difficult to believe that an $1.900 office has been adrift ever since Mr. Bissell became Postmaster-General, but such is the fact. Mr. Minnick, who was Mr. Wanamaker's stenographer, resigned to accept a more profitable engagement in the Chestnut street bargain store. It has been generally supposed that Mr. Bissell had selected some one to take his place and look after the official correspondence, so none of the regular office seekers thought of applying for the place. Thus it has gone begging. Mr. Bissell's agent has found a man who, he thinks, will suit. Postmaster-General Wanamaker did not utilize Mr. Minnick's services as a private secretary, but employed a newspaper man. Mr. Marshall Cushing, to whom he paid a good salary out of his private funds, and who has now returned to the practice of his profession. first-class stenographer to act in the capacity

AN ACTRESS TAKES POISON.

CARRIE GRANVILLE CHEERFUL, BUT BENT ON DEATH.

Such, at Least, Is the Bettef in Newark Got Landanum and Creesote "for Tooth-nehe" and Dr. ak It with Fatal Effect.

"Mix some laudanum and creesote for me of two sprightly young women who entered a drug store in Newark on Monday The druggist gave her two dramehs of each in half-ounce vial and thought nothing more of the matter.

The young woman who made the purchase was Carrie Granville, the leading lady in Leonzo Brothers' company, which is playing the "Dog Spy" in Stetson's Grand Opera House in Newark. Her companion was Miss Emma Dunn, another member of the comperformance. Carrie Granville had been fully up to her part at the matinée, but her friends noticed that she seemed depressed when off the stage, and Miss Dunn must have suspected something, for she said afterward to Alfred Hensler, who is Carrie Granville's husband lays a negro part in the deg drama:

"Did you know that your wife bought lauda num and creosote to-day?" Hensley was apparently troubled about the nformation. After supper he said to his wife:

You have been buying polson."
"Who told you?" she asked, and he informed her. She laughed pleasantly about it and said that she bought some laudanum and her. She laughed pleasantly about it and said that she bought some laudanum and creosote for a toothache. When she met Miss Dunn at the theatre she took her to task plarfully for telining her to task plarfully for telining her hustand. She went through her part in a cheerful manner and excelled herself in singing and dancing eliciting rounds of applause, which apparently gratified her and put her in a good laumor. Just as the curtain fell upon the last act, she stopped into the wings and drained the little bottle. Her husband, in passing, saw her with her hand upraised and her eves fixed on the files.

What's up? 'he asked.

Without a word she walked into her dressing room and sat down upon a chair. Hensley was at her side in an instant, and, taking the bottle from a table, asked:

"Have you drunk the poison?"

"Yes, she answered.

"Mik is good," she said, and then became silent. She did not answer, but opening her mouth disclosed her tongue, burned by the carbollo acid, which many druggists sell for creosote.

"Mik is good," she said, and then became silent. She did not speak again. Her husband got some milk quickly, and one of the company hurried to Egge's drug store near the theatre and brought Dr. Julius Egges to the theatre. He found the woman lying upon the floor in a comatose state, and, after doing all he could for her, he sont her to Rt. Barnabas Hospital, where she died shortly after 3 o'clock in the morning.

Everyeffort was made by the members of the company to show that the taking of the poison was an accident, but it was proved that the young woman hed only one bottle, and that she knew the nature of its contents.

Airs. Hensley was 23 years old, and had been upon the stage nearly ten years. She married Honsley in New Orleans seven years ago. She leave-one child, and she has a stepsister living in Orange.

ARRAIGNED FOR NON-SUPPORT.

Actor Leonard's Wife Natisfied With a Pifth of His Income.

Mrs. John F. Leonard had her husband arraigned before Justice Burke in the Harlem Court yesterday for not supporting her. Leonard is a member of the Irish comedy team of Whitley and Leonard, now playing at Hyde & Behman's theatre in Brooklyn. Mrs. Leonard was Miss Hose G. Mack before her marriage. She was a song and dance artist when she met Leonard, some two years ago. They were married a year ago, and Mrs. Leonard retired from the stage. She said her husband abandoned her, and she had him arrested last January. He promised then to pay her 310 a week, but had since given her but $14.

Kehoe arrested Collins on suspicion, and afterward searched his room. Locked in a trunk, which was bid-den under Collins's bed, he found the stolen silk. Collins said he gotthe silk from two men, whose names he refused to tell. He was re-manded in the Tombs Folice Court yesterday.

The Anti-Pool Room Bill is Now a Law. ALBANY, April 25.-Gov. Flower signed the prepared by Anthony Comstock and Introduced by Senator Saxton. It is an amendment to the Ives Pool law, which was passed seven years ago by the efforts of the race track people. Previous to that time the selling of pools was illegal. The intention of owners of race tracks who had the Ives bill passed was to perwas illegal. The intention of owners of race tracks who had the leves bill passed was to permit pool selling at the race tracks only and to compel any one wishing to bet to go to a race track. The pool room men evaded the law by doing what they called a commission business and by claiming that they did all their betting at the race tracks. This new law prohibits all poolselling or bookmaking except on race tracks. No apparatus for poolselling or bookmaking is to be allowed away from race tracks. The recording of bets or the taking of bets on commission away from the race tracks is also prohibited. The owner, lessee, and occupant of a pool room are equally guilty; so is the stakeholder of a bet. There is a long drag-net provision to cover everything except betting at race tracks. Any vicilation of the law shall be a felony, punishable by imprisonment of from one to five years in State prison.

The race track men passed the bill over the opposition of the pool room men. After the pool room men. Saw how things were shaping

Mr. Schurz said that the "execution en masse" of fourth-class Postmasters has caused conspicuous scandal." The four years tenure law, he said, does not apply to fourthclass Postmasters, and he had assurances from Washington that the rumor that a rule making such an application will be enforced is unfounded.

"Civil service reform," he said, "is goodpolities. The ravages committed by Mr.
Clarkson called forth severer criticism than anything done by Mr. Nevenson, who preceded him, and fifty removals made by Mr.

be stung by a feeling of shame at the thought that abuses so giaring have been permitted. ascertained that three feeble-minded women patients had been subjected to "paddling," and two of them had died soon atterward. One of these, Josephine Blessing, while sick with pneumonia and confined to her bed, was twice "paddled" on her bare person by the Doctor and the matron because she would not take medicine. She died a few days after.

Theresa Cliuton, an epileptic patient, complained of being sick. The matron said she was not sick, but ugly, and she was paddled with a hard wood paddle. She died two days afterward. Mary Moore was put in a strattacket, her ankles fied with cords, stripped, and paddled by the matron and her first assistant. All this Dr. Willett confessed was in direct violation of the orders of the trustees, who had insisted that there should be no corporal punishment.

E. K. Burnham is President of the Board of Trustees. He was formerly Superintendent of Public Buildings at Albany. Notwithstanding that complaints have been made before, the trustees did not not, and have allowed the superintendent and his wife to resign.

SMITH WINS HIS CASE. The Court of Appeals Affirms the Award of Damages Made by the Lower Court

ALBANY, April 25 .- The Court of Appeals today handed down a decision in the case of Clarence M. Smith, respondent, against the Manhattan Elevated Railway Company, appellant, in which the judgment of the General Term of the Court of Common Pleas awarded the plaintiff $1,000 damages and costs. The action was brought by the plaintiff for an unlawful assault made on him by the elevated railroad guards on Jan. 27, 1880, Smith attempted to hoard an elevated train on the Second avenue road near Chatham square. He stepped aside to let a lady enter ahead of him and the guard slammed the train gate before he could get aboard. He tried the next car, but falled there, and finally swung himself over the last car platform as the train pulled out. At Hanover square he secured his value, which he had dropped on the front platform when he jumped on the train started the guards selzed him and, without asking him to leave, or giving a reason for their action, forcibly ejected him from the car. The de ence was that the plaintiff had hoarded the train in the first place in violation of the rules of the road, and that no more than necessary force had been used in ejecting him. The court of Appeals sustain the judgments awarding him damages. tempted to board an elevated train on the and says he has been intimate with Nettie Raphovitch.
